GROWTH OF PUBLIC LIBRARY IN INDIA

India has been the cradle of one of the earliest civilizations. Intellectual enquiry and philosophical thinking were the factors that shaped the Indian civilization. The ancient Indian civilization literature like Rig-Veda, Upanishads etc. Is all based on philosophical thinking and still to day they are considered as philosophical treaties. It is believed that around 3500 B.C. and that the instrument of writing through in crude form was invented. This was used as a tool for dealing with the practical day to day affairs. In 400 A.D. there existed one of the reputed universities namely the Nalanda university. Besides Nalanda , Valabi. Taxila , Vikramsila Mithila and nadia also existed. The important thing to be noted in the history of development of Indian libraries is the excavation made at Amaravati Nagarjunakonda. In this period the five story structure was used for the storage for the books. The library was at the top of floor. In medieval period, some of the moghul emperors were famous for there great love for books. They have enriched private library but this library is not for public. They appoints staff for the preservation of library books. When the printing press is invented it gives a raga of library growth. Printing in India is started in 1556. The first library in modern India was established in 1784 attached to the Asiatic society of Bengal. After the death of Tippu sultan the many of manuscripts were transfer to the Asiatic society library. Asiatic society library of Bombay was established in 1830. The Calcutta public library was established in 1835 by the English community in Calcutta. The Connemara public library which was established in madras in 1896 also provides a vital role in development of Indian library development. The establishment of Delhi public library 1951 is also an important step in the history of public library movement. In order to support the library development Raja Ram Mohan Roy library foundation was constituted in 1972. The establishment of INDONET (India's information network)

CALIPNET (Calcutta public libraries network) etc. are the important miles stone in the development of library movement in India. The national library of India is established in 1948 at Alipur Calcutta through the concept of service and basic functions are the same for all the libraries there are different types of libraries depending on different customers. These are generally students, teachers researchers businessmen, doctors, housewives and so on this basis the libraries can be divided in to following categories:

Public libraries
Academics libraries
Special libraries
National libraries

Public libraries cater to needs of all sectors irrespective of age sex occupations social or economic status. Public library serves the public. The academic library is defined as the library of schools colleges and universities. They are grouped together because they serve mainly to students and teachers. Their functions and services are mainly for students and teachers.

The national library of India is Imperial library of Calcutta which was established in 1948. There are so many acts were also passed for the development of library in India.

Madras public library act 1948
Delivery of books & news paper act 1954

After seeing the above sentence we can say that the concept of library in India is very old. India is giving five laws of library science which are very useful in the library. The five laws are given by Dr. S.R. Ranganathan who was the father of Indian library science.

LIBRARY LEGISLATION IN INDIA

The current status of the public library system in India is hard to ascertain and describe, because a consolidated picture is not available. There are twenty-eight states and seven union territories in India . All have their own public library systems, structure, and pattern of financial assistance. Nineteen of the states have enacted library legislation and the rest are providing public library service without legislation. The states that have enacted library legislation are:

TAMIL NADU LIBRARY LEGISLATION

Tamil Nadu is the first state that enacted Public Libraries Act in independent India. It came into force with effect from 1 April 1950. The objectives of the Act are contained in its Preamble as, ‘An act to provide for the establishment of public libraries in the province of (Madras) Tamil Nadu and the organization of comprehensive rural and urban Library Service therein’. It has 19 sections. The salient features of this Act are given below:

- 1) This Act facilitates establishment of Public Libraries in the State.
- 2) Constitution of State Library Committee for the purpose of advising the government on such matters relating to libraries.
- 3) Provision for appointment of Director of Public Libraries to control, direct and supervise public libraries.
- 4) Constitution of Local Library Authorities, one for the City of Madras and one for each district.
- 5) Every Local Library Authority shall levy in the area a library cess in the form of a surcharge on property tax or house tax at the rate of six paise per rupee.
- 6) The Government shall contribute Library Fund to each of the Local Library Authority, except the City of Madras, to the amount of library cess collected.
- 7) The Act amended Sec.9 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, Central Act XXV of 1867 to the effect that every printer shall deliver five copies of each book to the State Government out of which four will be deposited in the State Central Library, Madras. Tamil Nadu was very rich in public libraries. The Connemara Public Library was opened for the public in 1896 and became the State Central Library from 1 April 1950. There is a tremendous growth and development of public libraries since an enactment of Tamil Nadu Public Libraries Act 1948 being the first state in India with Library Legislation.
